Peaks from Pike Hill

By Frederick Marshall Davis

"Yes, it takes just three minutes from the time the setting sun touches the horizon until the top of the disk finally disappears from view," were the words spoken to me by George Howe, one night recently as we sat in his home together, gazing with interest into an ever changing sunset from a look-out that is unsurpassed anywhere in this locality.

My previous visit there was late in the fall of 1915 and we both recalled, as he grasped my hand at the door, that it was the time when the foundation was being laid, some ten or eleven years ago.

On entering, I immediately noticed that the place was characteristic in itself and a unique home for a student of nature.

"It is rather an unual sight for the Presidential range of mountains to be white the last day of May," he said, as we looked upon heavy banks of snow that could be easily seen with the naked eye.

"The most distant mountain clearly visible from here is fifty-two miles away—by air line," he said as he walked to the back part of the room and brought forth a powerful glass, which brought the far stretching waste of distant hills much nearer and clear to our view.

We scanned the countryside for some minutes when an interesting conversation started and I found myself seated comfortably in his study, in company with a person whose wide scope of knowledge on nature reaches far beyond the common individual of the present day.

He turned the leaves, for general reference, of books that he brought from a library that contains no less than thirteen hundred odd volumes and it was plain to me that the owner was a past master in the art of education.

"We don't need to open that case," Mr. Howe said, as he pointed to a showcase that contained silver and glassware enough to dress a table in one of the best hotels in New York City, and at the same time pulling forward a dainty table that he put in readiness and prepared a strawberry lunch that was fit for a king.

Now and then I was instructed to beat a hurried retreat to one of the spacious windows to watch the color of the ever changing scenes or a passing storm in the hills that were slowly putting on their night garbs in a fast fading twilight.

"Take this specimen for your own," he said, as I sat and looked upon numberless gems, with awe and apprehension. They were his own, they were the fruit of long travels, they were his reward for long hours of hard labor. I dropped the specimen in my pocket and noticed that it was a topaz, a precious stone of golden cast and brilliant color. There is no end to the amount of time that Mr. Howe has spent as a diligent student in the great school of nature and it is a fact that he has travelled each night, to a given spot, for a period of six months, to find out if he knew what a sunset really was.

Since boyhood, Mr. Howe has always been extremely active in the study of nature, the globe and open dictionary and bits of natural earth resting all about the room tell a story in their own way that Mr. Howe is never idle, but instead, always working to fortify himself in the great power of knowledge.

"Please sign here," he said, as I stepped from an adjoining room where I had gone only a few minutes before. I penned my name there in the open book and noticed that the long list of visitors during the past two years was enormous. Fourteen hundred and twenty-seven names were already listed, the records show that among this list that nearly every state is represented, with an average of ten visitors each twenty-four hours.

"I have had 788 visitors since the 8th day of March, this year," he said, and I noticed that among the list, many faraway lands were represented, including: District of Columbia, Hawaiian Islands, the Dominion of Canada, Cuba, Central, North and South America. By repeated visits to the Howe residence, Clayton Murch and James Smith each have walked 748 miles. Richard Box, a constant visitor, has already walked 705 miles in the past fifteen months.

One of the interesting books drawn from Mr. Howe's library was the works of Dr. Lacroix, the permanent secretary of the French Academy of Science, with whom Mr. Howe acted as guide and was assigned to assist him during his ten days spent in this locality. The book is a 662 page book, written in French and the many illustrations and plates are of great attractive power.

Mr. Howe is a speaker of note and has participated far and near on many occasions and more than once has been offered and refused the position of Maine State Geologist, and has twice filled the office of Maine's Academy of Science.

Late that evening I left a poem that I was glad to write and dedicate to Mr. Howe and I listened as he read the lines with interest and I soon passed out through the portals of his home, realizing full well that a talk with this nature student was instructive and to most people, interesting.

I paused for a moment and turned to look with one last fond glance, through the dim twilight to the peaks, plainly seen from the top of Pike Hill.

"John Coyle, our groceryman, is doing poor business. How can he expect to do much?"

"David Conkey died at his home on Tuesday. The doctor gave it out as heart trouble. Whiskey killed him.

Gordon The bride is a very ordinary girl who doesn't know any more about cooking than a jack-rabbit and never helped her mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty and has a gait like a duck. The groom is an up-to-date loafer. He has been living off the old folks at home all his life and is not worth shucks It will be a hard life.

A WORD OF WARNING

Did you hang up the receiver? It's an easy thing to forget to do so and the telephone people tell us that it occassions lots of trouble. In every case special attention is required by a telephone employee and while a majority are corrected from the central office, many require a visit by a repairman. When a receiver is left off the hook, the line is reported busy or out of order. On party lines it puts all the stations out of service. Subscribers can help to prevent this unnecessary trouble and improve the service by cautioning employees, servants or others to be careful to replace the receiver on the hook when finishing a telephone call.

There was a large attendance and good time at the 4th of July picnic, held at Songo Pond.

"Uncle" John Jones, aged 78 years, caused us all many anxious moments when he failed to return home, Friday night. He started for work as usual, Friday morning; Mrs. Jones said he complained of not feeling well, but refused to stay at home. Upon inquiry, she found that as it was so rainy, he decided not to work, and started back home at about 9 o'clock; it was supposed he took a short cut through the woods, but no one saw which way he went. As soon as the news of his absence spread, a searching party started out, and with the aid of lanterns did what they could. Finally it was decided it would be of no use to look farther until daylight. As early as possible, the next morning, a large number of townsmen scoured the woods in all directions and he was soon found by Forest Churchill, who fired signal shots to the others. Mr. Jones was lying on his back and had evidently been unconscious all night during the heavy showers, but roused enough to speak to the men. He was carrid to Mr. Leighton's and a physician summoned at once, who removed him to his own home. He is cared for by his wife, and at the last report remains about the same.

PARIS—PREVAILING PRICES OF
Edited by Don C. S

March 4, 1855—Pleasant in the sun, but cold and windy, 3 feet of snow at Norway and nearly all gone at Yarmouth and Portland. But little snow and ice at Augusta last week. Went there from Portland to attend to the matter of moving county buildings from Paris to S. Paris. The committee consisting of the Joint Delegation from this County granted leave to withdraw. Nothing can at present be done.

A meeting at H. N.'s Academy Hall and a meeting of outsiders at Frost's Corner confirmed last night the nomination made a week ago for town officers in Norway. The Rum Party last night nominated for Selectmen David Frost, Frank Whitman and Joel Millett.

March 11—Cold, windy day, very uncomfortable and a large body of snow in the ground. At the town meeting last Monday the Liberals succeeded for Selectmen; the Republicans for Moderator and Clerk and other officers mixed a very noisy town meeting. Corn is worth $.80, wheat $2, oats 60 cents, hay $20 and very scarce, flour $12 per barrel, potatoes 75 cents, butter 25 cents per pound. The Maine Law in its new form pass'd the Senate last Friday with but few amendments and will pass the House the coming week.

The people in this village will get a charter for a mutual insurance co. It has pass'd several stages at Augusta.

Uncle Bennett is quite low and sick and it is expected that he will not recover. I expect to attend Court at Paris next Tuesday, as Juryman.

March 18—Sunday. Very pleasant. Yesterday Uncle Bennett was buried. Mr. Thompson attended and Officiated. Mr. Bennett died last Thursday morning, 15th inst. He died with old age; the funeral was at home.

Lewis Crockett and wife are at our home today. I have been attending Court the past week as Juryman and not yet excus'd. Mrs. Cloudman died on Friday, the 16th inst., and is to be buried today. The Maine Law Bills pass'd the Maine Legislature last week in the Senate unanimously in the House, 90 to 29.

The Canal That Was

Story of the Old Time Cumberland and Oxford Route for Freight and Travelers

Alfred Elden, in Boston Transcript, July 7, 1926

If it were possible for a present-day motorboat yachtsman of Boston to turn back the wheels of the unverse to that interesting period anywhere from 1830 to 1870 he might have embarked on a novel cruise impossible today. He could have sailed a craft up to fifty or sixty feet in length out of Boston harbor, along the coast to Portland, and then inland twenty miles to Sebago Lake without once stepping off his own deck!

Yes, indeed. He could have taken his own floating home right along with him into Maine's finest salmon waters simply by picking a lock. Or, rather, by picking twenty-seven locks! Not only would it have been possible for him to sail directly to Sebago Lake, but he might have proceded far beyond to the northward Not until he had penetrated inland clear to Harrison Village almost out of Cumberland County into Oxford, need his cruise have ended.

In fact such trips were being made daily—not in yachts but by canal boats. Back some seventy-five years or more one Luther Fitch (there are still Fitches galore around Sebago Lake) agreed to supply his niece in Groton, Massachusetts, with all the necessary lumber for a house.

Captain Fitch owned a canal boat which he loaded with planks, joists and boards at a little saw-mill on the shores of the lake. He made a successful journey to Boston, where he unloaded his cargo and returned to Sebago Lake. Not only one but two or three trips did he make, and the building material he transported went into a house which is said still to stand in Groton.

All this was possible because of the existence of the Cumberland and Oxford canal, one of Maine's biggest and most important pieces of engineering and high finance of nearly a centuri ago.

The Sinuous Songo

Because of it the Legislature of the Pine Tree State gave its official sanction to a lottery!

Because of it the Canal National Bank, one of Portland's oldest financial institutions had its origin!

From the earliest times the winding carriage road down through the valley of the White Mountains was the main thoroughfare out of the north country into Portland And the Forest City in those days was the trading metropolis for everybody east of the Connecticut river in New Hampshire and the easterly edge of Vermont. In those "good old days" teams did everything. But in the second decade of the last century there came an irruption of canals all over the country. Maine irrupted with the rest of the States, and Dame Nature lent herself admirably to the project.

Sebago lake, meaning in Indian, a "stretch of water," is fourteen miles long by eleven wide, and receives the water of twenty-three ponds. It is connected to the northward with Brandy pond by the sinuous Songo, Maine's most picturesque river. Although the birdman can fly from its outlet in the big lake to its head at Songo lock and cover no more than one and a half miles, yet the navigator of the little lake steamboat must sail six miles and make twenty-seven turns! Small wonder it inspired the poet Longfellow:

Walled with woods on sandy shelf,
Ever doubling on itself
Flows the stream so still and slow
That it hardly seems to flow.

And Nine Gents

Brandy pond was a good old name that stood for something at its christening. A milder-mannered generator now speaks of it as the Bay of Naples. It flows through a narrow passage on the north from Long Lake or, as our ancestry knew it, Long pond. This network of lakes, ponds and tributaries drains an area of five hundred square miles. Before the advent of railroads it was the natural outlet of an extensive country. It was not surprising that as early as 1791 the practicability of "a canal from Sebago pond to the Presumpscot river" was being considered.

In 1821, after Maine had freed itself from Massachusetts, a charter was granted by the newly-created legislature to construct a canal from Waterford in Oxford county to the navigable waters of Fore River in Portland upper harbor under the name of the Cumberland Oxford Canal Corporation. Holmes Hutchinson, recommended by Governor Clinton of New York and by Engineer Wright of the Erie Canal, was selected to estimate its cost and feasibility. He placed the probable expense at $130,504.09 This was considered a very low estimate by the canal company committee, although they "did not deem it their duty to spend time or paper in argument to convince the skeptical, as it was clearly correct!"

The State Lottery

The first meeting of the shareholders was held in Portland, November 27, 1823. To aid the undertaking the Maine legislature that same year created a lottery to raise $50,000, the amount raised and paid into the State Treasury after the prizes had been deducted to be turned over to the Canal Corporation.

The tickets were snapped up not only in Maine but in Massachusetts and other sections of New England. It is said that Cyrus Shaw, a deacon of the Baptist Church at what is now Oxford, drew one of the capital prizes of $5,000, and he used part of this to build a new church. Dealers in lottery tickets made window displays of them and inserted advertisements in the Portland and Boston papers. Crude wood-cuts showing horns-of-plenty from which streams of golden coins were pouring, and other appropriate designs, were used at the heads of the lottery announcements to attract attention. The chances of getting rich quick were set forth alluringly in large type

One dealer in tickets headed his advertisement with this verse:

Whether native, French, Irish, English or Scot
If you venture a little it may be your lot,
To gain a high prize, and then you may say,
"I'll work in fair weather and rest a wet day."

All the Way to Portland Harbor

But somehow even the alluring lottery prizes did not produce the hoped for revenue. The undaunted promoters, however, found in a sympathetic legislature further aid. In 1825 the Canal Bank at Portland was chartered, with a capital of $300,000. One of the principal conditions of the charter was that a quarter part of the capital stock should be invested in the stock of the Canal Co. Thus came into being the Canal Bank, one of Portland's soundest financial institutions today.

Maine Public Health Association Report

The report of the Maine Public Health Association for 1925 is out and covers their activities in a pamphlet containing nearly seventy pages.

The report is divided into three parts. The first, comprising twelve chapters devoted entirely to the work of the Association during the year. There is also a summary of activities in four counties where the local associations voluntarily become a part of the state association. Part two contains the annual audit, with list of members, contributions and friends of the association. Part three is a review of activities filed with the state association by certain affiliated local societies.

A large amount of work has been accomplished in the public schools and the Modern Health Crusade has taught pupils to think and act in terms of personal hygiene. The eyes, teeth, nose, and throat have received especial attention, while proper food and fresh air are important items in teaching and practice. Free clinics are producing wonderful results.

The Three-Quarter Century Club with 15,000 and more members, organized by the Association, has accomplished a threefold purpose and established first, that life in the open air, simple nourishing food, ample hours of rest and healthful work or recreation tend to prolong life. Secondly, to create good will for the Association. Thirdly, to produce living evidence of the claim that "Folks live longer in Maine." The entire project was developed and concluded within a period of thirty days at an expense of less than $800.

Tuberculosis and cancer have been investigated by the Association and much work has been done in cooperation with Association organized to stamp out the diseases.

The annual sale of Christmas Health Seals is a campaign directed by the Maine Health Association. Receipts for 1925 were $30,177.90. Penobscot led with $8,621.36. Oxford County was eighth with $1,081.36 or .028 per capita. It is estimated that approximately 4,000 Maine men and women take part each year in this campaign. They perform this service without hope of material reward, but realize that every seal sold is a bullet aimed at the causes of preventable sickness and unhappiness.

The Association is incorporated as an educational institution. It is supported by memberships, contributions and bequests.

If everything else has failed, try patience.

Children's Clothing

One of a Series of Articles on Child Care Written by Students of Home Economics in the College of Agriculture, University of Maine.

Clothing for the pre-school child should be simple, easy to launder and durable. The weight of the clothing depends entirely upon the home conditions of the child. If the home is heated all winter, and the rooms are kept warm, then it is best for the child to wear little cotton dresses or rompers. If the rooms are cold, however, precaution should be taken so that the child will not be cold. In this case woolen dresses would be more suitable.

The underwear for winter should be heavier than the summer wear. Probably the cotton fleece-lined union suits or the little shirts and drawers are the best to buy for a child this age. Woolen undergarments are so very expensive that the majority of people do not use them now. If it is possible, four sets of underwear should be had for each child. Since these union suits are of thick material, there is not much chance of the air circulating through them, so it is advisable to change the undergarments twice a week. Clean undergarments are not only more healthful but also are much more comfortable.

It is very necessary that warm outer-garments be provided so that the child may play out-of-doors in winter as well as summer. The little woolen teddy bear suits are very nice for the younger child to put on when out of doors. Some kind of leggins (possibly some made out of some of dad's old stocking legs) should be put onto the child if he is playing in snow. Stout shoes and rubbers should be bought for every child. The stockings may be a heavy weight of cotton, silk and wool or all wool.

The child should not be allowed to play indoors when he is all "bundled" up in heavy garments. The body gets overheated and when he goes out of doors again his body may be in a fine condition to "catch a cold".

Homemade clothes for the child this age are just as satisfactory as the expensive ready made ones. Very often the child this age can wear the made over garments of some older member of the family. If the mother is handy with the needle this is an excellent way to cut down the cost of clothing for the family.

If the children like to play mudpies in the spring and fall (as most children do) an excellent laundry saver for the mother is a little oilcloth apron for the child. This can be easily made by taking a square of oilcloth and sewing tapes at neck and at waist. This keeps the dresses, suits, sweaters and coats from getting soiled so readily. It also keeps the child from getting wet if he accidently spills a pan of water or falls in a mud puddle.

Regulate the clothing for children to the temperature. Don't dress them too warm or too cold for it is very uncomfortable and unhealthy if he is hot or cold all the time.

The School Child

Like the pre-school child, the one who is going to school should have his clothing to suit the temperature of the buildings in which he lives. Teachers say that in school buildings which are well heated, many children actually suffer from the heat all day because they have on so many clothes! Over-precautious mothers, fearing that the child may get cold enroute to school, dress him so warmly that he is uncomfortable. To overcome this the mother should not add more inner clothes, but instead more outer ones which the child may take off when he arrives at school. Thick leggings, overshoes, heavy sweaters, etc., are not good for the child to wear in the school room. Have him take them off and put them on when he goes out.

The same kind of underwear that the pre-school child has is good for the older one

The school dresses for the school girl should be plain and simple. The wool ones (light weight wool material is best) can be very plain. Collars and cuffs of some cotton material are very fine for they may be taken off and washed when they become soiled. A frequent sponging and pressing does wonders to the wool dress.

The school shoes should be strong, well made shoes, which are broad at the toes, flat heels and which conform to the lines of the foot. Rubbers for wet weather save the wear of shoes greatly and keep them looking better for a longer period of time.

The thinner dresses can be plain too. Ruffles, tucks, etc., make more work for the mother and may be easily dispensed with for the younger child.

If the mother has time it is a very good plan for her to teach the girls in the family to sew. Little tasks like darning socks or mending tears can be done by the young child. It is easier for the child this age to learn to sew than it is for an adult for her fingers are smaller and muscular control is in the process of development in youth.

Clothes and Health

All clothes for children should be very loose. Clothing which is tight chafes the body and may be harmful for it may develop bad habits which are injurious in later life.

Dresses and slips should hang from the shoulder, not from the waist. Do not have shoes and stockings tight for they may cramp the foot and push it out of the natural shape.

In the Kitchen with 6 Famous Cooks

FIVE WAYS TO PREPARE CHICKEN

These Are Favorite Recipes of Four Famous Cooks

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of unusual cooking articles contributed to this paper by six famous cooks.)

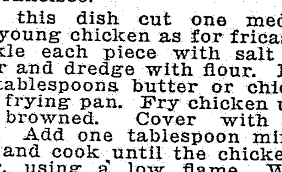

Chicken is a universal favorite. Very few folks can find it in their hearts to refuse a second helping of this appetizing fowl. Four famous cooks give tempting recipes for cooking it—fricassee, fried, broiled, stewed, and soup. There's variety enough for everyone!

MRS. SARAH TYSON RORER

Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, the Philadelphia cooking expert, has a recipe for a delicious chicken corn soup.

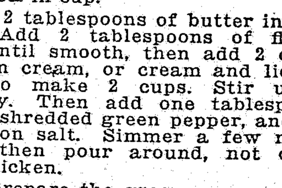

"This is an excellent dish," she says. "With a salad, coffee, and a bit of ripe cheese it makes a wholesome meal."

Chicken Corn Soup

Her directions follow: Singe, draw, and cut up as for stewing a two year old hen. Put it in a kettle, and cover with three quarts of cold water. Bring to a boil, and cook until tender—about two hours.

Remove chicken, skim the broth, and put it back on the burner. Add two medium sized onions chopped, a teaspoon of salt, dash of pepper, and a box of noodles. Add one pint of canned or fresh cut-off corn. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Add the chicken cut into small pieces. When hot, serve. If too thick, add milk to thin.

Delicious Fricassee

For chicken fricassee, made according to the recipe of Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, Los Angeles cooking expert, select a young chicken, weighing about 3½ pounds. Season pieces of chicken with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and fry in hot fat until brown. Place in casserole, add water and cook in hot oven, 350 degrees F. for one hour. Keep the cover on the casserole.

As They Cook It "Out West"

Pacific Coast fried chicken is delicious. You have the word of Mrs. Belle DeGraf for that. Mrs. DeGraf is a domestic science counsellor in San Francisco.

For this dish cut one medium sized young chicken as for fricassee. Sprinkle each piece with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Heat four tablespoons butter or chicken fat in frying pan. Fry chicken until well browned. Cover with hot water. Add one tablespoon minced onion and cook until the chicken is tender, using a low flame. When chicken is done, remove to serving plate. If any liquid remains in pan, drain off in cup.

Put 2 tablespoons of butter in the pan. Add 2 tablespoons of flour. Mix until smooth, then add 2 cups of thin cream, or cream and liquid left to make 2 cups. Stir until creamy. Then add one tablespoon finely shredded green pepper, and ½ teaspoon salt. Simmer a few minutes, then pour around, not over the chicken.

To prepare the green pepper pour boiling water over it and let stand 10 minutes. Shred with scissors.

Two Southern Methods

Miss Rosa Michaelis, New Orleans domestic science specialist, comes from the south, where chicken is one of the most popular dishes. She gives two southern ways of preparing it.

For southern broiled chicken, she says, select a very young chicken. Clean, singe, and split it down the back. It will almost lie flat. Season with salt and pepper, and brush melted butter all over it. Have a broiler ready over a moderate fire. Place chicken in it, and let it broil slowly for a half hour or a little longer if the chicken is not so tender.

Turn the chicken once in a while to brown both sides. When done, place on a heated platter which has been garnished with sprigs of parsley or lettuce leaves. Pour melted butter over chicken, and serve hot.

With Brown Sauce

Chicken prepared with brown sauce is good served with rice, Miss Michaelis says. Here are the ingredients:

1 chicken
2 tablespoons lard
1 sprig each of thyme, parsley, and bay leaf
1 onion
2 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper to taste

Clean and cut chicken in small pieces. Season well with salt and pepper. Chop onion fine. Put lard into deep pot. When hot add onion and let brown. Add flour. Let this brown, and add chicken. Let simmer a few minutes with thyme, parsley, and bay leaf chopped fine. Stir often. When all is nicely brown, add 1½ pints boiling water. Stir until it begins to boil.

If necessary, add more salt and pepper. Cover and let simmer until tender (about an hour). The gizzard, liver, and heart may be cooked with sauce, and served with boiled rice.

No matter if the chicken is old or young, you can make it taste good if you choose one of these recipes.

(Be sure to read the interesting cooking article on this page next week.)

New Toaster

It really pays to invest in a good toaster which lasts a life-time. Many hardware stores are displaying a new blue glazed toaster. It makes four evenly browned slices of toast at a time. It does not warp. Very handy too, for crisping breakfast cereals. Its handle is ever cool. It can be used with equally good results on oil, wood, coal, or gas stoves.

PENCIL POINTS

No man fully appreciates hash until after he has eaten dinner at a cooking school.

Every man is introduced to a lot of people who don't care to know him.

It has been said that girls give up piano playing after marriage. Probably the dear creatures started this rumor for the purpose of encouraging young men to propose.

Teach Your Children to Study the Ads—

ONE of the finest things you ever can do for your children is to train them in the business of buying. All their lives they will be confronted with problems of personal, if not more complicated, investment. From early youth they should be prepared to meet these duties wisely.

Teach them to study the ads in this paper. Let them get all the joy they can from the "funnies," and we hope they will find much of interest in our news items and articles; but urge them to read the ads.

Newspaper advertisements are entertaining. They are instructive. They are inspirational. As they appeal to the child's imagination, they train his judgment and encourage his desire for the better things of life.

Help your children to become careful buyers, not impulsive spenders. Teach them to study the ads

SANBORN'S SPECIAL COLUMN

Fifty miles for a dinner! Twenty years ago it would have been a long distance. Now it is only a couple of hours away. New Meadows Inn was the place. Never there before. Heard much about it. Was curious, so went once, just once!

It was of a Sunday and there was a continuous buzz of cars all the way. Thousands of them, more or less. No accidents, no delays, and everybody seemed happy. Not all these joy-riders stopped at the Inn, but the most of 'em.

Plenty of room for parking and only a short wait. Dinner from 12.30 noon to 3 p. m.; supper, 5 to 8 o'clock, both mixed with canned music! Lobsters, clams, and well dressed people met and ate, talked, laughed, and were gay.

Expenses were something like this: Dinner $1.75 each, cost of transportation $25.00, sundries $1.10. Total $36.85.

Why talk of hard times and extravagance! No such animal around, judging from the crowd at that dinner. Those with us were: Walter C. Smith, R. S. Osgood, Mrs. C. E. Twitchell and Mrs. Chas. E. Osgood, just the family, that's all.

Somehow I like Senator Moses of New Hampshire. Can't help it. He is wrong on the League of Nations stuff, but independently right on all else. I agree with Frank E. Mitchell, sage of Alton, N. H., when he says:

"It is not impossible, nor do I consider it improbable, that Senator Moses will one day be President of these United States. He stands well with both Democrats and Republicans throughout the country. In Manchester 300 Democrats changed their enrollment so that they will be able to vote for him at the approaching primaries."

We manage to get to Ed Coburn's, Middledam, a couple of times each year. The fishing season is the chosen time.

Our first visit was May 17th and we took along I. W. Waite of Norway, hunter, trapper, guide, also Middledam postmaster. He was with us a week and the total fish caught by both was 32. Competition was not great at that time. Thirty of the fish taken were returned to the water. It would be unreasonable to kill so many. There are others who like to catch trout and salmon.

The Florence burns kerosene the modern way, by first converting it into kerosene gas. It has no wicks to trim and requires no priming. To light the burner you merely touch a match to the asbestos "Kindler". The flame can be set for any intensity, and will not creep or smudge.

Florence Oil Ranges ar made in five sizes. Easy to use, easy to clean, and a credit to any kitchen, they have won the enthusiastic endorsement of millions of women.

REPRESENTATIVE WILL STUDY LOCAL CONDITIONS

A representative of the Vacation Service Bureau of New York arrives here soon to study the vacation resorts of this vicinity with reference to describing their attractions in the Vacation Guide, a handbook for vacationists. Only resorts of high standing are described in the guide, which accepts no advertisements.

The survey will include hotels, camps, boarding houses and farms. The Vacation Service Bureau, which is non-profit making, was organized under the auspices of the Playground and Recreation Association of America and has the strong backing of numerous great business organizations of New York City. It has been financed for its first two years by friends of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, and the business houses are now helping to make it self-supporting by means of yearly subscriptions to its service.

More than a thousand resorts have been investigated by the Bureau's representatives. They are in New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, New York and part of New England.

The Bureau's primary object is to make available information on vacation places in the vicinity of New York to employees of the business houses of the city. The points covered by the questionnaire on hotels, boarding houses, farms and camps include rates by the day and week, character of clientele, capacity, facilities, condition of the premises, quality of food, service and moral environment. The respective rail and water routes that serve the resort are listed, together with running time and fares. The director of the service is George A. Mead.

PINE TREE LEAGUE

West Paris 8; Turner 1

The leaders worked up a hit-fest at Turner, Saturday, easily landing the game and securing a firmer hold on the championship cup. The winners secured fifteen hits off Beck, while Benson escaped with seven blows against his delivery. Bessey, the Turner short stop, staged a circus stunt of a bare hand catch off Rowe's willow and incidentally doubled Emery off second.

Norway 9; South Paris 3

At South Paris, Saturday, Norway defeated that team and climbed into the second berth.

Shaw pitched a steady game for South Paris until the last two sessions when a few hits, disastrous passes, and more deadly error made a combination that gave Norway 5 runs. Up to the blowdown the teams were on a 4-3 basis in favor of Norway.

Rex Martin led the assault on Shaw with 3 hits and McCarthy walloped a home run with the cushions occupied. Eight players landed for at least one hit.

Plummer laced away a two sacker on McCarthy, but after the third inning the Paris outfit failed to connect safely with the Norway slinger. Nine hits were registered against him during the battle, three were off McGinley's bat.

Lesson for July 18

THE CALL OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1; 4:12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Certainly I will be with thee.—Ex. 3:12.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses at the Burning Bush.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses, the Shepherd.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Facing a Great Opportunity.

I. The Lord Speaks to Moses From the Burning Bush (3-1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. He told him that He was the God of his fathers, the covenant God. As soon as he knew that it was God that was speaking to him, he hid his face.

II. Moses' Commission as the Deliverer of His People (3:7-10).

Observe:

1. God's active interest in His people (v. 7).

In a preamble of this commission God declared:

(1) "I have seen the affliction of my people." So keenly conscious is God of all that goes on in the world that not one of His chosen ones can be touched without His notice.

(2) "I have heard their cries." We sometimes feel that God does not hear, but no cry ever goes up from the heart of his covenant child unheard.

(3) "I know their sorrows." Many indeed are the sorrows of God's children. They are so diverse, but He knows all about them and will adapt himself in grace to their need.

2. God's gracious obligation to His people (vv. 8, 9)).

(1) To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians.

(2) "To bring them up out of the land."

(3) "To bring them into a good land and large—unto a land flowing with milk and honey."

3. God's commission to Moses (v. 10).

"Come now, therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel out of Egypt."

III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11-4:10).

1. His personal unworthiness v. 11).

He said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh?" He realized his insufficiency for this task. Moses did not refuse to go, but laid his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that He would be with him.

2. The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vv. 13, 14).

Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer forty years before. Since God changes his name as he assumes a new relationship to his people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be and his corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty by showing a name differing in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is "I am." This name is from the Hebrew "to be." It indicates:

1. God's self-existence.

It sets forth the idea that God is the self-existent one and the source of all existence. There is no existence apart from Him.

(2) His self-sufficiency.

He said, "I am that I am." God is the unique one. He is not dependent upon any other existence.

(3) His unchangeableness.

"I am that I am" may be expanded to mean, I am what I always was. What I always was and am I always will be. The "I AM" of this passage is the Jesus Christ of the New Testament. Therefore the apostle could say, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever."

3. Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1).

This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (4:2).

4. Lack of eloquence (4:10).

He confessed that he was slow of speech and of a slow tongue. His ability to speak had not been improved by the Lord's message to him. The Lord's reply (v. 11) carried a real rebuke. He assured him that the God who had made man's mouth could give man the ability to use it. This difficulty the Lord in His infinite patience met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron.

The Truth

Next to the Crucifixion of the Lord Jesus Christ there is no truth that you and I need more to lay hold of than the truth of the living Christ—alive today, and personally present with all who trust in Him.—C. A. R. Janvier.

Need of Prayer

Deeper than the need of men, deeper than the need of money, aye, deep down within this spiritless life of ours is the need of world-wide prevailing prayer.—Robert E. Speer.

WILSON'S MILLS

Mrs. Cecil Pullen and son, Kenneth and Miss Pearl Bennett of Portland have been visiting, Mrs. Lizzie Bennett for the past two weeks.

Stewart Hamblin, a former teacher, has been visiting at Clinton Bennett's.

Saving the Villages

Towns Made up of Many Small Industries Possess Great Means of Prosperity and Contentment.

Henry Ford is endeavoring to save the villages by showing how small industries can be established in them so as to provide some employment for the people and thus keep them from crowding into the big cities and abandoning their country homes.

At one time most New England villages had such small industries. In many of them there was a blacksmith shop, for example, which kept several men employed. Quite likely there was also a sawmill turning out lumber which was cut on the neighboring farms and floated down the brook or the small stream. If a small water power was available there was also a small textile mill, a wood turning plant and similar small industries. Perhaps there were several general stores trading with the neighboring farmers and supplying their requirements.

Economic changes have gradually been destructive of village life. The small industries have been vanishing. The blacksmith has gone and where his shop stood there is probobly a garage. The music of the droning saws tearing their way through the pine and spruce logs is no longer heard. The general stores are in competition for most of the year with the stores which the farmers patronize by using their automobiles and the good roads. Many fine old houses which were once occupied are closed with shutters on the windows and the front lawns grown up to rank grass and weeds.

Mr. Ford has said that farming, while an essential industry, is a most wasteful one because the farmer's time is not fully occupied. It is his idea that by establishing small industries in the villages the farmers can find employment and run their farms at the same time, taking a day off now and then from the factory to do the tilling, planting, weeding, hay cutting and crop harvesting. He has established one or two small industries in Michigan villages and found that his plan works well.

With the water power available in Maine the Ford idea should be made to work better than it can almost anywhere in the country. Every village should have a small industry of its own, drawing its power from a centralized source and having it delivered where it is required by transmission lines. This insures constant, unfailing power, not dependent upon the uncertainties of some small stream or river.

Manufactures can be made to see that small industries located in Maine villages will give them dependable, skilled and contented wage earners. Each family can have its home, in the village itself or in the surrounding country. The farms can be made to produce all that they are producing now. The boys and girls can be kept at home instead of being scattered throughout the country and obliged to seek opportunities in the crowded cities. With automobiles, motion pictures, the radio, parcel post and rural free delivery, the telephone, electric light and power and other things it will cost less to live in such communities than it now costs in the crowded centers of population.

American rural life will be preserved. The children will have an abundance of wholesome food, good environment, fine schools and the right kind of social life and, what is better than all else, a home better than any that can be supported in the cities.

Maine should seek to make Henry Ford's plan effective in this State. If it succeeds in getting its water power developed and capital from outside the State interested in the idea there is no reason why all its villages should not be attractive to small manufacturers. In such places they would be free from all labor troubles. Not being subjected to heavy costs for rent and taxes, and the uncertainties of labor supply, they could cut down the cost of production. Wages would be paid in the big cities because the cost of living for the wage earners would be greatly reduced.

Many Maine villages now have some small textile plant or other kind of an industry. Where they are to be found the farms in the vicinity are being kept up and are giving their owners a good return for their work. The families are kept together. The community life is more wholesome. The people are more prosperous and enjoy many of the good things of life. They do not become industrial slaves. They own their homes, many of them drive automobiles, all of them are well fed, prosperous and contented.

What Maine needs are many small industries located in its villages, not a few big industries in the cities.—Press Herald

P. S.—You have all heard of Norway the past year, if you never heard of the town before—even Henry Ford in Michigan did, and it is just the kind of town referred to in the above article. Norway is made up of a variety of industries, many of them small, but progressive. We are not stopping there, however, we want more industries—there is plenty of room. If interested come and look the situation over. We may have just the location etc., necessary to your business. Come and look around anyway.

Maine Health Campaign

The arousing of whole communities, the organization of entire counties, the enlisting of thousands of individuals for constructive health work, the prevention of sickness and suffering in hundreds and hundreds of Maine homes, the training of 40,000 Maine boys and girls in daily health habits, the placing of nurses for the prevention as well as the relief of sickness, the work that we have done in Maine factories and homes, our schools and colleges, our little cities and towns, our clubs and other local organizations—this in brief is the work of the Maine Public Health Association.

We firmly believe that no work for the advancement of a community or a state is so important as this work for better health. We believe that the business interests of a community and state are handicapped by sickness and are constructively developed by health—and this applies to the directing heads of the business and to the hands which run the machines.

We know that a home which is handicapped by unhappiness and often by problems of family finances.

We know that public health work definitely diminishes sickness by prevention and we know that public health work actually extends the living days of the individual. Within the past ten years the average life has been extended more than five years as a direct result of public health work.

What does this extension mean?

It means that more mothers have been enabled to bring their children through the trying days of boyhood and girlhood to a point where they can be self sustaining.

It means that more fathers have been enabled to keep their home fires burning.

It means that the workers on our farms and in our mills and factories have been enabled to produce more for the world and for themselves.

This increased longevity means that Maine men and women are having an extension of their maturity for service to mankind and to themselves.

It makes possible an enrichment of the common welfare through the activities of men and women free from the handicap of physical and mental suffering through preventable sickness.

It means increased years of usefulness for the average man and woman and it means a childhood less burdened than in former years by frailties originated or increased by diseases now recognized and fought as preventable.

And most important of all, it means that the army of successful American men and women will approach the later years, with health and mental vigor conserved and with a great store of mature vision drawn from their experience in life which can be given to the needs of their home communities and to their nation. Most of the important work of the world is accomplished by the men of mature years.

Too often just when the man of accomplishment and success reaches the time in life when his personal affairs need less of his time—and when he could be of great service to the great problem of public affairs—his years of fruitfulness and value to his nation are cut off due to mental and physical strain and lack of health conservation during the earlier years. Health conservation will enrich the annals and achievements of the Nation.

That's what public health does. It is worthwhile. It is the most important movement in the world today. It is a practical work. It brings returns many times multiplied over the moderate cost. It pays dividends in every family, in every store and office, in every mill and shop. The safety of your own home depends on the health of the community.

OXFORD COUNTY UNITED PARISH

Attended Institute—Services at South Waterford, East Stoneham, North Waterford and Albany—Social Friday Evening at North Lovell.

Last week, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bull, of the United Parish Staff were attending an Institute on Rural Church Work, held at Ocean Park, in connection with the Summer School of the Missionary Education Movement. They found there a group of men fully alive to the importance, the needs and the opportunities of the Church in the open country. It is one of the hopeful signs to know that the country church is receiving something of the attention it deserves in these days.

On Sunday, the Staff conducted services at South Waterford, East Stoneham North Waterford and Albany,and also at North Lovell and East Waterford. It is gratifying to see increased interest and larger congregations in nearly all of the services. We hope the map recently published showing the location of many of the churches in the open country and small towns, will remind tourists on Sunday that they are always welcome in other services, even though they are not able to be at their own church.

On Friday evening of this week, there is to be a social at the Grange Hall at North Lovell, and we hope that the young people of North Lovell will all be present and also that many other parts of the Parish will be able to attend. All out for a good time.

We are expecting Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, D. D., former editor of the "Congregationalist" to be with us on Sunday. Dr. Bridgman is at present Secretary of the A. M. A., and all should hear him, who possibly can be present at one or more of the services. The present plans will take him to East Stoneham at 9.30; Albany, at 11.15; and to an open air service at Waterford Flat at 6.30 in the evening. This will be the first of the open air services, but with the many beauty spots in the Parish, we ought to make this a feature that will be much appreciated.

This is the last week for the Church Vacation School at Waterford. Next week, the School opens at Albany on Wednesday. We are hoping to accommodate all the boys and girls from the upper end of the Parish at that school, and we are looking forward to a very enthusiastic term. If you would like to know whether these schools are really worth while or not, just ask the children who have been there—or their parents—and listen to what you hear.
